"THE OVERLAND TRAIL"
by Jay Monaghan

Review by Henry Nash Smith for the New York Herald Tribue Weekly Book Review..

The development of a trail from the Missouri River to the Pacific cean is one of the classic subjects of American historiography. The story has a beginning in the discovery that a great river system draining the Northwest emptied into the sea through the Columbia. It moves with pace and color through the Lewis and Clark expedition, the annals of the Rocky Mountain fur trade in the 1830's and the conquest of the Pacific Ocean in the 1840's. It comes to a dramatic end with the completion of the transcontinental railway in 1869. As Mr. Monaghan remarks in the foreword to "The Overland Trail," the road to Oregon and California, "is remembered by most people as the pattern for all emigrant roads — the symbol of pioneer America."

The trail was a cross-country wagon track. 3,000 miles long which threaded a half dozen mountain ranges. It represented an enormous investment in human labor and hardship and ont a few lives, but almost no capital. After Lewis and Clark spent a couple of thousand dollars of Federal money trying unsuccessfully to find a transcontinental route for waterborne commerce, the minute ecquaintance with the Northern Rockies and the Interior Basin on which the trail was eventually based was accumulated as a bey-product of fur-trapping ventures. A party of John Jacob Astor's employees on their way back from Astoria were the first white men through South Pass, focal point of the trail. The approach to South Pass up the Platte and the Sweetwater was developed by William Henry Ashley and Andrew Henry, of St. Louis. But what the mountain men contributed was the immaterial factor of knowledge, and the final result was more than anything else an intellectual construction. Even at the peak of its use durig the gold rush the trail depended on no engineering beyond the work of successive wagon trains in chopping dow trees that blocked their way up the canyons of mountain streams, rolling boulders to noe side and shoveling down approaches to gullies with steep sides.

Eventually shrewd entrepreneurs set up haphazard ferries at the more dangerous crossings, such as that of the South Platte, and carried wagons over for $1.50 each, but this was a refinement and plenty of wagons got acoss by other means. The distinctive feature of the trail was that it could be used by frontier farmers with only their standard equipment of wagon, livestock, ax, skillet and rifle. Over much of the route human beings subsisted on game, principally buffalo. Horses, mules and oxen kept themselves alive by grazing along the way or could be fed on cottonwood bark, although of course with the heavy traffic of 1849 and later years the grass gave out and thousands of animals starved. The Great Migration was a triumph of living off the country. Anyone who feels ni need of freshloning up his admiration for the average man of the mid-nineteenth century need only drive out U. S. 30 and notice the passes and canyons through which the emigrants snaked their wagons, cattle, wives and children, with no more reserve supplies than could be got into the wagon at the outset.

Mr. Monaghan is a professional historian who has gone systematically through the scholarship devoted to the trail but he has written this beek for the general reader in a simple narrative style. Avoiding historical problems like the pressures behind westward expansion and the international crises it provoked, he tells his story as a series of individual adventures. Many people who set out into the Far West before the coming of the railroad realized they were embarking on an epic enterprise and set down what they saw in journals. The historian thus has a wide range of first-hand accounts from which to choose. In addition, he can draw upon such classic narratives as the Lewis and Clark Journals, Irving's "Astoria," Parkman's "Oregon Trail" and Mark Twain's "Roughing It," as well as the devoted historical scholarship of the last half-century. Mr. Monaghan also makes telling use of his own observation of the landscapes in which the transactions of his narrative took place.

A book of this sort, which is not intended to add to existing knowledge of the subject but to interpret what is already known, has an interest like that of a musician's reading of a familia score. One might compare Mr Monaghan's Tamsen Donner with George Swart's, his Parkman with Bernard DeVoto's, his Frewith Bernard DeVoto's, his Fremont with Cardinal Goodwin's.

NEVADA CITY — Phil G. Scadden, county assessor, has requested the board of suepvisors to consider a reappraisal of county real estate.

SEVEN MEN, FIVE WOMEN ON JURY IN KISS OF DEATH MURDER TRIAL

NEVADA CITY: Lois Hunt Hardy, confessed murderess of James McLain, went on trial yesterday for her life. The jury was completed at 4:15 p. m. The district attorney, Vernon Stoll, said he did not know whether he would make an opening statement or not but asked for an adjournment until 10 o'clock this morning.

The defendant, who weighs about 90 pounds, seemed in good spirits. She was dressed in a black net dress which heightened the pallor of her face. She consulted freely with her attorney regarding the selection of jurors.

The courtroom was crowded when it opened. Many, during the morning, had to stand. As the prospective jurors were called, Lynne Kelly, attorney for Mrs. Hardy, asked them each a $64 question: "If you were charged with murder would you be content to rest your case in the hands of 12 jurors of the same mental attitude that you have in this case?"

The district attorney never failed to ask: "Have you any scruples either from religious or other causes, which would make you hesitate to impose the death penalty?"

Seven men and five women were chosen to sit on the jury. They are Edna McGrath, Nuna Lopes, Cal Christenson, Vinetta A. Jones, Thomas Lawrence, Bessie McDermott, Chester R. Peterson, Jonathan Pascoe, Angelina Falconi, Lonnie F. Goss, Mervin Hansen, and Charles F. Worthley.

It was notable that no prospective jurors from Truckee qualified for service. All of them pleaded prejudice and were formally disqualified.

JUST WONDERIN'

I Wonder if sometime a road
Will wind about the world,
Through rugged hills, across the plains,
Bv shores with wild waves swirled.
And is it possible, I ask,
That even now today
We're building amid heat and strife
The road to liberty?

During the greater part of the current year, now so rapidly passing, we, the citizens of the San Juan Ridge, have had a job of road work under observation. It envolved the reconstruction of a portion of Highway 49, which led from the town of North San Juan to Freeman's Crossing on the middle Yuba river and the task was no easy one.

The old road at this particular point, clung precariously to canyon walls; it resembled a misplaced plate rail and like the calf path of poetic fame, it was most certainly "bent askew;" surveyors to whom the task of finding an easier grade was assigned, inspected the old road and decided that it must be practically abandoned. New plans were made and then steam shovels, roaring tractors, bull dozers all manned by capable crews, went into action. There were deafening noises, clouds of dust arose to high heaven and dirt flew. Obstacles that could not be removed by machinery were blasted away, a fill was made and that stretch of road offered no easy mode of traveling to those who were obliged to drive over it. Many voiced complaints, but there are always grumblers where things are being done and also those who contend that they could do the work better and with much greater celerity.

At length, there came a day, when the road was finished; the noisy machines were taken away, toiling men dispersed and the noise, confusion and dust clouds were things of the past. In their place, there was a safe, easily negotiated grade, straight and smooth and we realizd that we had been repaid for all the inconvenience and discomfort experienced while the strenious task was in progress of accomplishment.

California is proud of her highways and they are being constantly improved and made safer for the traveling public. The trails the padres followed from mission to mission in the days of old, have broadened into a highway system second to none in America and the snakeentine trails which the pioneers carved upon the walls of modern canyons have assumed in some cases, the appearance of valley boulevards. Calf-paths are being abandoned, obsolete roadways discarded, our highways are fast becoming new and modern.

Now I'm thinking about calf-paths of the mind; antiquated modes of thought, old beliefs and superstitions, these too, must fade away before we can hope for a new and peaceful world whose spiritual and mental processes can travel as they should, in paths unmarked by the cloven foot prints of the red god, Mars, unblemished by the spectacles of human hate and strife which mark our strenuous today. Perhaps, the confusion and conflict which is disillusioning so many of us, is a sort of road building and when it is past, there may be broader, smoother and more peaceful avenues of thought wherein our minds may travel sanely, wisely and well.

Uncle Silas says; " Our American Presidents are a powerful lot according to their opponents. Hoover, so it was charged, was to blame for the great depression, F. D. R. for the second world war, and now Mr. Taft is blaming Mr. Truman for the plight in which Europe finds itself today."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

"Turrible, Turrible, Turrible!"

Ben Ryder is back! After twenty years in Capital City, Ben has retired and come to enjoy life in the family house on Maple Street.

First thing Ben does is write us complaining how Our Town has changed. "Why, there's no mud in the streets to sink up to your ankles in!" he says. "No pistol feuding in the town square! No moonshine liquor or Saturday night brawls! Nothing to do but settle for a temperate glass of beer in a law-abiding tavern!"

"Turrible, turrible, turrible," Ben says, "how a town can get run down in twenty years!" And then Ben takes his tongue out of his cheek and tells us how proud he is of the orderly, law-abiding atmosphere he finds here.

And from where I sit, you can point to that growing preference for a moderate, wholesome glass of beer as one reason folks in Our Town are so temperate, and neighborly and well-behaved.

THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

FEBRUARY 15, 1852.—The boys over on Selby Flat are having a bushel of fun in these slack times. When the inquest was held on Jack Ristine, it leaked that there had been a turkey supper at his cabin. Two or three of the witnesses, who were on oath, gave it away under pressure, and the landlord, who has not yet got over being mad, appeared to the justice of the peace for warrants for as many of those as he learned were at the feast. As he could not swear as to who stole the birds, he wanted them arrested as accessories to the crime. The judge refused to issue the warrents and the miners got hot and leagued together to quit patronizing both the hotel and barroom. This brought him to his senses, he apologized and agreed to drop the matter. It gave the boys a hunch, especially those who had lost their bets, and for deviltry they called a miners' court, preferred charges against the lucky ones who had won their money, on the theory that they must have had guilty knowledge of the larceny or else they would not have been so anxious to bet. The charges were drawn up in mock legal form and were full of "whereasas," "weherins," "aforesaids" and "be it knowns" as a lawyer's brief. As I recall the document, it runs about as follows:

"Whereas, Before, on, about, or preceding Christmas Day, some party or parties unknown to the complainants, but strong nnd corroborative circumstantial evidence, suspected to be (here followed about twenty names, including my own and my Saleratus Ranch friends), and

"Whereas, we believe these aforesaid named parties did feloniously, surreptitiously, not having the peace and dignity of Selby Flat, its hitherto untarnished and sustained name and reputation at heart, enter, break into and force open a certain coop known to have contained one dozen gobblers, and did abstract, take away, carry off and levent with the said ibrds, the aforesaid turkeys being the property of the proprietor of the Selby Flat Hotel, and

"Whereas, said gobblers having been provided, bought and procured for the delectation, comfort, sustenance and happiness of your petitioners, it being understood, agreed and promulgated that the aforesaid and before-named birds were to be roasted, stuffed, cooked, garnished and served to the denizens of Selby Flat, a town situatd and being in and about Brush Creek, Nevada County, state of California, U. S. A., irrespective of previous condition, sex, or color, at the rate of two dollars and fifty cents per capita, with mince pie and fixings thrown in, and

"Whereas, said felonious abstraction wrought upon your petitioners great mental and physical anguish, disturbing their peace of mind as well as the dignity of Selby Flat, and

"Whereas, the above-named and aforesaid parties did, contrary to the Statutes of the Commonwealth (See Randall on non sequitur, vol. IV, page 32), enter into a conspiracy, based, founded upon and made possible by their guilty knowledge of the intended forcible and felonious abstraction of the previous mentioned gobblers, wheedle, entreat and coax innocent bystanders, to wit, your petitioners, to wager, hazard, and bet certain sums of money in regard to the presence of the aforesaid turkeys at a Christmas dinner, and

"Whereas, it is a well known and deep founded principle of common law, as well as an obiter dicta, in all well regulated sporting circles, that no man can take advantage of or profit by betting on a dead sure thing;

"Therefore, your petitioners respectfully pray this court, taking into consideration the heinousness and enormity of the offensive, to adjudge the aforesaid and before-named parties of the first part guilty of foul murder, and that if the court and jury be inclined to mercy and should hesitate to impose capital punishment, that the least penalty to be meted out to these outlaws and disturbers of their neighbors' turkey roosts be the return to your innocent and defrauded petitioners of the monies they were induced to put up, chance, and risk on a game where the cards were stacked 'agin 'em'."

There was a lot more to it which I can't remember, and it was a gay afternoon consumed in taking testimony, swearing witnesses and making mock speeches. It was nearly dark before the trial was finished and the case submitted to the jury, which brought in a verdict without quitting their seats, of "Rape in the first degree." The sentence was drinks ad libitum for the town, and the landlord got even as the crowd patronized his bar with a free hand and purse.

After I went home and got to thinking it over it all seemed childish and foolish, but Pard differed with me. He argued that the lives we led were dismal enough and that anything that would break the monotony and furnish musement was a safety valve. I guess he is right, for, nonsensical as it was, I enjoyed it as much as any of them. After all, there was a damper to it, for even at our wildest we could not help thinking of the mysterious fate of Ristine and Carter, and that the last we ever saw of them was when we were eating supper in their cabin.

THE LIFE STORY OF GENERATOR 0-63000

You cannot buy a powerhouse by catalog order. You must have it built to specifications right from the ground up. Take the giant electric generators for example—they take months and years to build and assemble part by part. Here is the life story of generator 0-63000 long on order.

During the later part of 1949 it will be set in place in the new $35,400,000 Rock Creek Powerhouse this Company is building on the North Fork of the Feather River in Plumas County. It will then be "tuned up" like a grand piano along with an identical unit dedicated to a life of spinning out 169,000 additional electric horsepower for Northern and Central California.

Generator 0-63000 will be more than two years old before it goes to work producing power. Factory fabrication time will take 21 months. Upon arrival at the RockCreek Powerhouse, five months will be required for re-assembly and run-in tests.

Generator 0-63000 is one of fourteen new generating units this Company is now installing for new and enlarged hydro and steam electric powerhouses that are part of our present $350,000,000 construction program.

Vital Statistics About Generator 0-63000

Weight	875,000 pounds

A ship named after the state of Alabama has been carried on the U. S. Navy's list of ships for over 140 years.

The Navy has two fleet post offices in the United States which handle all mail going outside the States to ships and shore stations. One is on the East Coast at New York and the other's on the West Coast at San Francisco.

A course in after dinner speaking has been given at the U. S. Naval Academy for several years.

The U. S. Navy Yard at Mare Island, California, has an establishment covering approximately 2,200 acres.

Right after Missouri was admitted to the Union, friends gave Captain William Driver, a merchant ship skipper, a flag for his brig, with a twenty-fourth star added for the new state. As he set sail, he hoisted the flag, and inspired by its beauty, named it "Old Glory." Thus the first, and actually only, "Old Glory" is now in a museum in Salem, Mass.

Serve Turkey Golden Brown and Juicy!
(See Recipes Below)

Thanksgiving Tips

As the days bring with them that cooler-than-fall feeling, as the frost gathers lightly on the pumpkin, we instinctively know it's time to talk of turkey and Thanksgiving.

If families gather at this season, as is the time-honored custom, you'll want a regal bird that's done to fork-tenderness, besides being golden brown and juicy. Around the bird, you'll want to assemble those foods that complement it best—snow-white onions with a bland cream sauce to mask their sharpness, crisp green brussels sprouts, savory with stock and bread crumbs, and sweet potatoes, of course!

To prepare the bird, follow these three steps to achieving the feast: Stuffing, trussing and roasting.

Prune Dressing.
(For 10-pound turkey)
3 cups cooked prunes
1 small grated onion
1 cup finely chopped celery
2½ cups fried bread crumbs
1 cup prune juice
½ cup chopped pecans, if desired
1 teaspoon nutmeg
Salt and pepper

Wash and soak the prunes. Cook them in water in which they were soaked, until tender. Cool, remove pits and chop. Fry onion and celery in two tablespoons of fat until soft. Mix thoroughly with fried bread crumbs, prunes, prune juice, pecans and seasonings.

Season the neck and body cavity of the bird lightly. Fill neck with dressing and skewer the neck skin to the back. Bring wing tips onto back. Fill body cavity with dressing, but do not pack it tightly. Skewer or fasten opening to hold in the dressing. Tie leg ends down to the tail.

To roast the bird first grease the skin with melted or softened fat. Place the bird on a rack, breast down, in a shallow pan which is open. If the bird does not have a generous layer of fat, cover with a fat-moistened cloth that is large enough to go over the top and sides. Roast in preheated oven set at proper temperature.

An 8 to 10 pound bird is set in a 325 degree oven for 3 to 3½ hours.

A turkey four pounds heavier requires the same temperature oven but is allowed four hours longer to cook. For birds larger than 14 pounds use a 300 degree oven and add ½ hour of cooking time for each four pounds. A 20-pound bird, for example, will take five to six hours to roast.

Do not add water or cover pan while roasting. If drippings burn, the oven is too hot. If the cloth covering the bird dries during cooking, remoisten from fat at bottom of pan. Turn bird breast up when about ¾ done. Remove cloth if more browning is desired.

Test for doneness when meat feels soft. This is done by pressing the thickest part of the drumstick with fingers. The leg joint also should move readily when turkey is done.

LYNN SAYS:

Try These Tips for Cold Weather Cooking

Ever use gingerbread as bread? It makes the perfect bread for dried fruit sandwiches. Try cream cheese for the spread in place of butter if you want a special treat.

Those apple pies you can't resist will be more so if you roll some cheese into the crust. And don't forget to brush the tops of the crust with milk if you want that special golden brown color.
